relation to the rights of American citizens abroad. Referred to the committee on foreign affairs.

To unotion, Mr. Bialue, Secretary of the Treasury, was directed to furnish information as to the amount of proparty setzed for frands on revenue law and the amount realized therefrom.

Mr. Eggleston presented a joint resolution from the Ohio Legislature withdrawing the rattheation of the constitutional amendment, and requesting the seturn to the Governor of the official papers in Washington giving the assent of Ohio the resolution. Referred to judiclary committee with orders to have it printed.

Mr. Eggleston remarked that it was doubtful whether the persons who called for such papers had the right to return them to the Governor of Ohio. He also desired to say that the Legislature of Ohio, in passing such joint resolutions, had gone against the wishes of the people of that State; that there had been a election in one of the Congressional districts, had sone against the wishes of the people of the state; that there had been presented before the prople, and the result of that state; that there had been presented before the prople, and the result of that the declaration in one of the Congressional districts the beginning the service of this movement. He was sails field that next fail the people of Ohio would reverse teir decision, and universal suffrage would be inserted in the constitution in addition to all. This manner of opposing these resolutions was most exthaordinary. They had been rushed through without any debate.

Mr. Summer said the action of the Legislature was most unpreceivated, as the State having once given its assent to the smeadment to the Constitution had no power to withdraw it, and recolutions of this Legislature were a mere brutum fut mich.
